Mary, Paul, Gary, Dick,

As indicated earlier, I was in DC today to give Bud the drafts of the next three complaints. He had time to begin the reading of one only, the one he has agreed to handle, if necessary, and we do presume necessary, to the Supreme Court.

That one is on the spectro. When in final form, there will be copies for you.

The two I'm filing pro se are on the Ferrie documents (where, without having read, on my description, he seems accord on the approach) and the panels. I'm hoping he'll be able to read them and make suggestions soon, so I can get along with that. Here I'll have to provide the copies, so, if possible, I'd like to do this through Paul, who can get the copies made at least cost. The carbons will be required in case I need dress copies.

I had the strangest feeling today, that the New Orleans lemmings are are alive and well in the Department of Justice. Carl Eardley has finally surfaced as one who figures in all of this. He wrote Bud in response to my letter to Rolapp (who, I presume, has decided he can get dirtied and doesn't like the idea). Incredible enough, he denies the existence of what I put in his hand, with Bud as a witness, to explain exactly what it is of which I wanted a copy and more, of which they have already given me severely-edited, cut-up and censored copies. Eardly is my friend! I love him so much I ever drafted a letter for Bud to send him. I was kind of tickled that they prefer the correspondence not to be with me, but I think they will learn we are (most of us) straight from Dunes. At least I think Eardley will have cause to self-fect on this when he gets the letter. The whole affair gets more incredible with every stupid blunder they make (and they do nothing else). Eardley apparently forgot that when I showed him what I want he indicated he'd refuse it (not that he was in on any of this from the record) and that I had told him simply I'd prefer not to have to fight him on it. See I couldn't script this as well as they do. And it seems I still have the eaten cake!

The actual filing of the two suits where I'll be my own lawyer may be delayed after they are drafted for as of now I do not have the slight fees charged.

Sincerely,
